

WHAMPOA CLUB

Since opening in 2004, Whampoa Club has delighted and surprised even the most discerning Chinese palates giving food lovers a reason to indulge.

While its art deco-inspired furnishings recalls the glorious 1920's Shanghai era, the cooking invigorates classic Chinese recipes with a contemporary flair. Whampoa Club uses classic Shanghainese and Cantonese tastes and flavors, prepares the dishes with disciplined finesse to accentuate those flavors and present them in an elegant and creative style.

In addition to the superb cuisine, guests can also choose from a range of 50 specially selected exclusive listed teas from the farthest reaches of China, elegantly served in traditional tea ceremony presentations. To add to the experience, professional tea sommeliers will be on hand to help diners choose from the vast selection.

Whampoa Club seats 200 guests and has 3 private dining rooms able to accommodate separate smaller parties, or be configured into one large private room for up to 80 people – the perfect venue for celebrations and private dinners. Additionally, two semi-private rooms with stunning views of the Bund are also available.

The Design

The exquisite tableware in the restaurant is custom-made exclusively for Whampoa, and includes green colored jade plates, as well as other various custom-made porcelain and glass.

Whampoa Club captures both the illustrious past and contemporary spirit of today's Shanghai. The design of the 1,800 sqm restaurant by Alan Chan is envisioned as a "modern take on art deco," and was described by Condé Nast Traveler magazine as "beautifully done up in 1930s Shanghai style, with lots of polished floors, red and gold lacquer, leather club chairs and crisp napery". The main restaurant, private dining rooms and wide hallways feature dramatic colors, geometries and textures, with gem-toned stained glass, shantung silk, ostrich skin and hammered metal panels creating an ambience of glamour and decadence.
